Millport man rescues French holidaymakers after their yacht runs into trouble

A HEROIC Millport man came to the rescue of two French visitors after their yacht became stranded off Cumbrae.

Cumbrae Support Team volunteer Bob Campbell swooped into save the day for the French holidaymakers when their vessel got into difficulty.

The 52ft-yacht was stranded at Kames Bay after a rope got caught in its propeller.

Bob was called by police to see if he could assist the couple in getting back on the sea and on their way.

However given the size of the boat, which berthed eight people, Bob was forced to call in divers to stage a rescue mission.

Bob told the News: "I know boats well and this one must have been worth around £500,000.

"The couple spoke very broken English and I speak very little French, but between us I was able to work out they had a problem with the propeller.

"They had come all the way from Paris and were planning to travel around Scotland for a month, so they were keen to get going.

"I knew we needed a diver to get down to the propellers. I initially thought of those repairing the pier but realised they are connected to a tube with the oxygen on land, so couldn't help."

Bob called in a favour from some local work boats and devised a plan to try and drag the vessel to the pier.

He explained: "We had to get the two boats together and pull the stricken vessel over to the pier where the divers were able to clear the rope.

"They also found fishing net trapped in the propellers.

"I was happy to help. The couple were so grateful and couldn't thank me enough.

"We got them on their way and they managed to catch the tide and be back on their way.

"But they came back that night and offered for my wife and I to have dinner with them on board. It was a lovely offer, but we politely declined — my wife doesn't do boats!"

Bob said he was happy to have been of assistance.

He added "It was lovely to know I was able to help them.

"It really was an stunning boat. It slept eight people and there were two bathrooms on board, it was incredible."

The Cumbrae Support Team are on the island to assist the emergency services and community were possible.

There work extends to defib training, assisting in power cuts, stepping in if anyone ever ends up stranded on the island and now helping stranded boats.

Those interested in joining the team can contact Bob at 01475 530 800 or 07930 115513.
